Hancock, Pearl River to try to reset landfill discussion

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board said. of Supervisors is trying to reschedule a special joint meeting to discuss landfill problems with the Pearl River County Board of Supervisors.

Hancock County Board President Ronald Cuevas said the efforts to reschedule will begin Monday. He stated that scheduling the joint meeting as soon as possible is essential due to a recently set deadline requiring Hancock County to close the existing landfill within 60 to 90 days after Aug. 31.

He said the meeting was originally set for Aug. 4 at the Hancock County Central Maintenance Barn in Kiln. However, the Pearl River County board was unable to come because their meeting that day lasted longer than anticipated.

"It's definitely not a problem of cooperation, They were eager to meet with us," Cuevas said. "They're in worse shape than we are. They don't even have a Cuevas said the landfill problem is the worst on currently facing the supervisors, with "no question about it."

"It's not a money problem. We could handle the money problem. It's a facility problem," he Hancock County is currently using a landfill located in Catahoula on leased NASA property. The landfill is filling rapidly and the county has already taken such space conservation measures as refusing to take tires, which can not be buried or burned, and sending trash other than household garbage to another site at Standard.

The supervisors are waiting for the results of soil borings by the State Board of Geology, which is checking several Hancock County sites to see if they would meet current state and federal specifications for a new

Compliance with many of those rules depends on the availability of a layer of clay that would form a seal inside a landfill, keeping the dangerous substances formed when garbage decays from leaching into underground water supplies. Hancock County does not have many potential sites due to the level of the water table and a small supply of areas where the proper types of clay occur, according to David Taylor of Gulf Regional Planning Commission, who has been helping the board coordinate its efforts to find both an interim and long-term solution.

Pearl River County contracts to have about half its garbage taken to a private site near Picayune and the other half to a private site outside the county.

The possibility of a joint solution was first brought to the Hancock County Board by State Senator Wootsie Tate and has been echoed by private firms including Browning-Ferris Industries, which operates in most of the Gulf Coast area.

The joint solution to the waste disposal problem has met with a favorable reaction from the supervisors, Cuevas said.

Although no actual decisions have been made and the board is in the process of gathering information at this point, the general consensus among the supervisors is that an incineration process will be the most economical and practical longterm solution, the board president added.

Even with incineration, a landfill will still be needed because the ash must be buried. Cuevas said he feels that the best short-term solution would be a landfill that could be used to bury garbage now, then used later for the incinerator ash. Such a landfill will probably have to be located somewhere on the Hancock-Pearl River County to serve the two counties best as well as for geological reasons, which for Hancock County include more difficul-ties with the water table than for Pearl River County.

"Our landfills keep getting farther and farther away from the need," Cuevas explained. "We used to have landfills, well, dumps really, in several locations that were easier for people to get to," he commented.

Circuit clerk pushes voter registrations

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

A special voter registration will be held at several Hancock County voting precincts on Saturday, Aug. 13 and Aug. 20.

Pam Metzler, Hancock County Circuit Clerk, appeared in June before the Hancock County Board of Supervisors requesting permission for the use of precincts on the two

The purpose of Metzler's request was to give the working people and opportunity to register and also to make it more convenient for the rural areas.

The precincts to be open on Aug. 13 from 8 a.m. to noon are: -Kiln West, to also cover the residents of Fenton and Kiln East precincts.

-Catahoula, to also cover the residents of Leetown and Flat Top precincts. Lakeshore, to also cover the residents of Ansley and Cler-

Bay-Waveland board to eye finish delay on junior high repairs

BY DENA BISNETTE

The beginning of school at Bay Junior High School could be delayed if the Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board approves a contractor's request for a time extension.

Superintendent of Education Roger Oge' said he plans to reccomend against the 15-day extension Monday when he presents the request to the board. The first student day is scheduled for Aug. 26, Oge' said. Starks Contruction of Biloxi is renovating the junior high and North Bay Elementary School under one of three contracts covered under a school renovation and improvement plan approved last year. One of the other contracts, an addition to Waveland Elementary School, has already been comon Bay Senior High, has not been let.

The renovations at North Bay are expected to be completed on schedule and at this point mostly involve the principal's office, forcing newly appointed Principal Rodney Fisher to make his preparations for his first year at the school in one of the other rooms, the superintendent said.

The Ingram Building at the junior high is also expected to be finished on schedule, with the extension involving the main pleted and another, the contract emergency asbestos removal project added to the contract last month.

If the board goes against his recommendation and approves a delay that causes school to start one day late, no problems are anticipated because an extra school day has been built into the schedule, he added.

He said there are also several procedures approved by the State Department of Education for making up delays of more than one day, including addition of days to the end of the school year or make-up days on Saturdays. 🔭

The board meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in the superintendent's boardroom at. Bay Senior High. Most of the remaining agenda consists of personnel matters.

Our New One And A Half Million Dollar Baby.

A Brand New Maternity Center That Will Surround Your Baby With Luxury.

Our new maternity center is open. And, frankly, we feel a lot like proud parents. Because we've spared no expense in creating a facility for welcoming babies that lives up to every parent's highest expectations.

Better Than A Silver SpoonWe designed and built our ma

We designed and built our maternity center to give your baby every advantage—when every advantage counts most.

First, we made sure our basics were exceptional: all-private rooms for all mothers, a choice of either homelike combination labor/delivery/recovery rooms or traditional labor and delivery suites, a delivery room for Caesarian births, two well baby nurseries and a newborn intensive care unit for babies who need special attention, a classroom for pre-natal instruction, a lounge for parents and visitors. And, while we welcome dads in delivery, we've also set aside a special waiting area with plenty of room to pace in comfort.

We furnished our new maternity center with the most advanced support technology available today. For convenience and efficiency, we put everything on one floor in a unit with its own lobby entrance. At NorthShore, there's no elevator ride, no long walk through the hospital, no confusion about where you are or where you're going.

The Best For The Best Of Times
Some people might say we went overboard in providing so many exceptional amenities. But, considering that a child's birth is one of life's treasured events and true miracles, we don't think so.

That's why our new maternity center isn't just adequate, it's luxurious.

You'll see what we mean from the moment we greet you at the door. For example, you might mistake our handsomely appointed lobby for the foyer of a fine hotel. You'll find our rooms are not only private—they're bright, fresh and airy, and they're every bit as comfortable as they look. We set aside a generous amount of space for our lounge and waiting areas and located them for easy access from our drive-up entrance as well as from all areas of the unit itself.

We spent a lot of time and effort to surround you and your new baby with a level of amenities you won't find elsewhere. And we're certainly proud of the result. But luxury's not the best thing about our new maternity center.

Better Yet, The Best Care

We've staffed our maternity center with people who are dedicated to providing the best possible care. We've given them the equipment they need and, just as important, a commitment to service that goes far beyond building an exceptional facility.

But that's nothing new.

We've always been known for the little things we do that make a big difference. Things like treating you to a private room at no extra charge. Preparing you for parenthood with informational (and enjoyable) child-birth classes. Lending you a beeper during the last month of pregnancy to make sure that out of sight isn't out of touch. Performing free examinations whenever your own doctor is unavailable.

What's more, we don't stop caring after you leave the hospital. We send a professional housekeeper to your home to do your chores and cooking for five days. We even send you out for a night on the town when you're ready to celebrate.

We've Saved The Best For Last.

Despite the fact that we spared no expense in building, equipping and staffing our new maternity center, it's not as expensive as you might think.

In fact, our prices are currently the lowest in the entire New Orleans metropolitan area. And, while certain packages involve conditions we'll be happy to explain fully in person or over the phone, they all include all the extras we've described here.

So the best thing about our maternity center is that you and your baby can have the best of everything at the best price anywhere. And that's one luxury you can hardly afford to do without.

Find out more about our one and a half million dollar pride and joy, and the difference it can make when your own new baby arrives on the scene.

On Wednesday there will be a Blood Drawing at the Waveland American Legion home on Coleman Avenue. In recent months there have been many news stories about a shortage of blood across this country and our area is no different. The drawing will be held from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Post 77's home, which is located behind Merchants Bank on Coleman Avenue.

The Hancock County Blood Bank has been in operation for many years and donors give a unit of blood on a regular basis.

Lin Rutherford, post co-chairman of the blood drawings, reports one of the problems is many of the older donors are now not able to donate blood because of age and some new donors are needed as replacements.

Blood drawings are held throughout the year at several locations in Hancock County to try and maintain a good supply for our residents.

One never knows when they may need a unit or several units of blood for themselves or a family member and it sure helps when you are a member of the Blood

It is hoped Wednesday's drawing will have a lot of persons offering blood and it will be very successful. We hope to see you at the Blood Drawing.

Wednesday was a great day in Hancock County for U.S. Senator John C. Stennis.

Senator Stennis was honored on his 87th birthday with the changing of the name of NASA's test facility to thé John C. Stennis Space Center.

The senator, with more than 40 years of service to our country in Washington, has been one of the leaders in pushing America's space program, not to mention the many governmental projects he has secured for the Mississippi Gulf Coast and state as whole.

To have cast 11,595 votes and make more roll-call votes than any other senator in history is also a great

Senator Stennis, even though he is from Mississippi, is well known across our nation's 50 states and nations across the world.

The many thousands of people in attendance, the most I have ever seen at one time in Hancock County in one spot, was a great tribute to a great American. The reception sponsored in part by Hancock Bank and the Gulf Coast Restaurant Association at Diamondhead's Country Club was a very good treat. The food was so delicious.

The tribute paid to Senator Stennis by Ronnie Cole and his band was also tremendous.

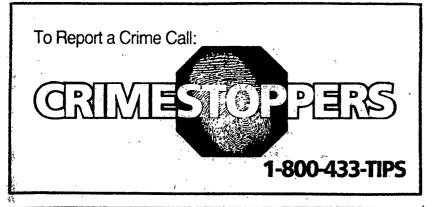

The only thing we heard any complaints about was the severe heat during the dedication ceremonies at the Stennis Space Center.

We wish Senator Stennis well in his retirement at the end of this year, and are proud as he is of being a Mississippian.

Don't forget Tuesday nights public hearing at the Hancock County Courthouse at 6 p.m. on the Public

The new law has an effect on many waterfront property owners in our area.

We hope there will be a lot of folks in attendance, as Secretary of State Dick Molpus has named a Blue Ribbon Commission who is seeking input from the public on this matter.

OUT IN THE ELEMENTS—Poll workers at Central School Precinct (Bay Junior High), were without electricity and under a walkway covering cluttered with construction materials while they conducted voting on Saturday morning. The poll workers from left are, Corliss Pursley, Hazel Breaux and Angie Morreale. Pursley said she had to obtain the services of some trustees to clear a walkway on Friday to the voting site and the poll workers had to sweep an area clean by the voting machines. It appears more preparations should have been made by election officials for the voting precinct at the school, which is under renovations. Voting conditions such as these add to the reasons for small voter turnout in special elections. The Sea Coast Echo also received a telephoned report Saturday that voters were having difficulty getting to the Lakeshore precinct due to road repair work in the area. JACKSON- Is Gov. Ray Mabus' governmental reorganization study going to be just another report that will wind up gathering dust on a shelf at the state Capitol?

There were three comprehensive studies on governmental reorganization going back to 1932 plus a couple more of lesser consequence. Without exception, at the time they were done, they wound up being shoved aside by the Legislature, and no broad reorganization of state government has ever taken Mabus has high hopes that is not going to happen to his reorganization study which was made public in hurry-up fashion last week. He believes since he was elected last year by advocating drastic reductions in the number of state agencies as a way to make government more efficient and save a lot of tax money that he was a legislative mandate to enact the recommendations of his reorganization commission.

Mabus ostensibly will toss his reorganization plan into the special session of the Legislature he is convening on Aug. 10. His strategy: By moving quickly to get the Legislature to act on the plan before it can be picked apart, he will improve his chances of getting most of it through.

But the legislative reaction this column was getting to his strategy was largely negative. Many lawmakers felt that Mabus was trying to force feed the 167 recommended changes in the structure of government without giving them time to fully analyze the impact and possible cost savings from the changes.

What most lawmakers seemed adamant against was to be thrown into a summer-time special session on governmental reorganization that will drag on for a month or more.

There has always been considerable skepticism around legislative circles that unless there were going to be wholesale layoffs of state employees, Mabus' contention that reorganization could save $40 to $60 million to fund his education program was not realistic.

Immediately that same doubt greeted the Mabus reorganization commission's projection of $64.5 million in savings from its plan which would combine 150 existing boards, commissions and agencies into 12 departments, all put under the governor in a flow chart.

The plan, according to the commission's estimate, would eliminate only 700 to 900 jobs in state government, many of which are already vacant. The reduction in jobs, a commission spokesman said, would account for half the projected $64.5 million savings.

If that were the case, then William Winter could have claimed more than $100 million in savings by the reduction of 3,200 state jobs during his administration, enough to finance his kindergarten program.

Comprehensive reorganizas tion studies were made in 1932. 1950 and 1969 and two lesser studies in 1977 and 1985. Yet the number of agencies and boards in state government has tripled in the last half century. At least in the last 10 years a dozen or so agencies have been combined.

The 1932 Brookings Institution study of Gov. Mike Conner, is still regarded as the "bible" of governmental reform in Mississippi. Although Conner, a former legislator and Speaker of the House, pushed hard for enactment of the report in the Legislature, he got nowhere.

His failure was mostly attributed to the preoccupation of legislators with pulling the state out of fiscal ruin. But I learned years ago, the bedrock of opposition rested on the proposed elimination of a number of state elective offices.

That same chargeelimination of seven elective offices—dogged an excellent 1950 reorganization study advocated by Gov. Fielding L. Wright, who lamented the fact that state government had grown to 103 agencies. The study called for reducing them

Wright, a popular governor, surprisingly backed off of calling a special session on the report in 1951. When the Legislature next met in 1952, it was a new administration, and there was little political clout behind the plan. Ironically, the only agency abolished in 1952 was the Egg Advisory Board, which nobody could find anyway.

Mabus did one smart thing in limiting his study to the executive branch, specifically avoiding tinkering with the baili-wicks of state elective officials.

But the Mabus plan reverses a longtime tradition in Mississippi government by abolishing dozens of policy-making boards which in the past have been considered, rightly or wrongly, insulation against total political control by a power-seeking

Mabus may have to convince lawmakers power is not his

Timber cuts path as valuable crop

By Patti Drapala Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Trees brought in the big bucks for Mississippi last year. The state's forest industry baryested a crop wonth $599 million, making timber Mississippi's second most valuable agricultural crop in 1987. Cotton, valued at $738 million, was the no. 1 crop last year.

"This is good news for Mississippi because it tells us we're beginning to realize the value of our forests," said Bob Daniels, forest products utilization specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "This figure is the largest on recent record, perhaps since the turn of the century."

The $599 million was a 25 percent increase over the harvested value of the 1986 timber crop. Strong demand for treated lumber, increased exports and expansion of the housing and remodeling markets strengthened the nation's forest industry. Mississippi, with its 16.3 million acres of forestland, had much to gain.

Timber severance tax collections for the state in 1987 totaled $3.5 million. Twenty percent of that amount was returned to the counties where the timber was harvested. The rest was placed in the Forest Resource Development Program (FRDP) to provide costshare assistance for reforestation and forest management. "Our timber is a valuable economic resource and it's also a renewable résource," Daniels said. "Many new mills are coming into the state, and many of the ones already here are expanding. They're showing pitals in New Orleans. confidence in Mississippi's ability to supply them with timber." Mississippi last approaced a record amount of value for harvested timber in 1979. The value of the timber crop that Anesthesiologist. year was $549 million.

The Institute for Technology Development, Inc. (ITD), Mississippi's high technology development leader, is seeking to help NASA's efforts in voicing support for the nation's space program which may face extinction this year. We are encouraging all Mississippians to voice concern over the issue," said Sally Bay Cornwell, ITD's vice president for technology transfer who works with the Space Remote Sensing Center in Hancock County, a division of ITD devoted to the commercialization of NASA remote sensing technology.

"One way is to get involved in the NASA Tech Briefs magazine's letter-writing contest on the benefits of the space program and the need for continued exploration of space."

Retin-A: the rest of the story

Robert J. Grieshaber, MD

Dermatologist Fountain of Youth, 'gets rid of wrinkles, 'reverses aging,' all phrases recently exploding onto newspapers, magazines and television sets. All adjectives to describe or to market Retin-A. To borrow a line from Paul Harvey, "I am going to tell you the rest of the story."

1. What is Retin-A?

Retin-A (tretinoin or retinoic acid) was developed by Ortho Pharmaceuticals about 15 years ago as an acne treatment. It is an excellent medication for treating certain types of acne. In 1986, an exciting study done 'photoaging.'

2. What is photoaging?
It is the 'aging' of the skin—wrinkles, blotchiness, yellowness, coarseness—that occurs from sun damage. This can lead to pre-cancerous and cancerous changes especially in fairskinned people.

What causes wrinkles?

Wrinkles emerge when the skin's dermis-the area between the epidermis and the fat—is damaged. The dermis consists of collagen and elastin. Collagen bundles weave together to give skin firmess and strength. Elastin fibers, intertwined among the collagen bundles, provide resilience and elasticity. With sun exposure, elastin fibers degenerate and collagen production is slowed. This damage to the dermis causes loss of the skin's support and wrinkles result. Other 'photoaging changes' include a decrease in the blood supply to the skin, resulting in sallow-ness; an increase in pore size due to laxness of the dermis around the hair follicles and follicle dilation with keratin; a decrease in epidermal cell turnover time (the normal exfoliation of the skin cells); and, in some people, the forming of atypical cells which can lead to pre-cancers and skin cancers.

4. What does Retin-A do? Most remarkably, it causes an increase in colagen synthesis in the dermis, thereby delaying fine wrinkles. Further, it increases the growth of small blood vessels supply the skin, thereby improving skin color. It also promotes desquamation of the epidermal cells thereby unclogging pores. That is how it works in acne. This may help decrease pore size. Retin-A also increases epidermal cell turnover, i.e., increases the rate of exfoliation of skin cells.

Thus Retin-A has the potential to do two things well and one thing not so well.

a. It promotes a subtle mini-face peel on a daily basis which can prevent superficial growth, pigmentations, and fine

b. It increases collagen syn-thesis which can delay the effects of gravity and sun damage. So it may delay future wrinkles.

c. It does not get rid of established wrinkles very well, only subtle fine wrinkling.

5. How should I use Retin-

Use in each person must be tailored to his or her skin type. It is applied at night after washing the face with a mild soap, drying the skin, and waiting about 10-15 minutes. Then a green pea-sized or pearl-sized drop is applied to the skin and rubbed in well.

Use only one pearl-sized drop for the entire face. No other creams should be used a night unless you are told to do so. Retin-A can be used around the by Dr. Albert Kligman of the eyes but not the upper eyelid or University of Pennsylvania was directly below the lower eyelid published, which shows that Avoid getting the medication in Retin-A applied to the skin may ameliorate the changes of face is washed with mild soap.

The newest technique for treating cervical dysplasia is laser surgery. In this surgery, a laser beam is focused on the abnormal cells, causing them to vaporize, and allowing healthy cells to regenerate.

Each of these procedures is performed on the examining table with a speculum placed in the vagina—and each lasts for only a short period of time.

It may be six months to a year before you have negative Pap smears again. If an outpatient procedure fails to rid the cervix of dysplastic cells, your doctor may repeat the procedure or try a different one.

If there's still not success, or if cervical biopsies reveal severe dysplasia or cancer, a cone biopsy might be performed. This is a major cervical procedure in which the outer coneshaped portion of the cervix is removed.

In the vast majority of cases, however, a positive Pap smear doesn't mean cancer. It's highly unlikely for cancer to show up on the Pap smear of a woman who is tested annually. That's why it's important for women of all ages to visit their gynecologists annually for checkups and Pap smears. This "Matter of Health" was prepared in cooperation with the obstetrician-gynecologists on staff at The University Hospital—the teaching hospital for the University of Mississippi Medical Center. Readers may suggest topics by writing to "Matters of Health," the University of Mississippi Medical Center, 2500 North State Street, Jackson, Miss. 39216-4505.

SPECIAL PROCLAMATION—Ronald Cuevas, left, president of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, presents a framed proclamation to U.S. Senator John C. Stennis at a reception in his honor at the Diamondhead Country Club. Emcee for the presentation and others was George Schloegel, partially hidden behind Cuevas and Ronnie Cole. The pro-clamation proclaimed August 3, 1988, as John C. Stennis Day in Hancock County. The reception was held after dedication ceremonies renaming the NASA test facility in Hancock County as the John C. Stennis Space Center. President Ronald Reagan signed an executive order May 28, 1988, renaming the National Space Technology Laboratories as the John C. Stennis Space Center. (Echo staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

'Goin' To Chicago' film will chronicle Black migrations and musicians."

Thousands of blacks have fled the deep blues of the Mississippi Delta for a promised land in the North, running from oppression and poverty and the dead-end dust surrounding a sharecropper's shack.

The northern exodus accelerated in the 1940s, with promises of a wartime industry job and a decent living. Now, in the 1980s, there is something of a reverse migration. Blacks sometimes return South to reunite with their families, even to live again in the heightened promise of the Sun Belt.

All of this will be chronicled in a 60-minute film directed by George King of Atlanta, supported by a growing list of foundations and co-produced by two scholars with the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at The University of Mississippi.

'We will focus on the migration from Mississippi to Chicago," said King, "through the eyes and experiences of one extended family. It'll be a documentray but will have a very personal style.'

With professional scriptwriter Lou Potter providing the words, King says the production will be first-rate. A target is acceptance by the Public Broadcasting System.

At Ole Miss, the collabora-tors are Dr. Bill Ferris -- folklorist, blues music scholar and director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture -and Dr. Ron Bailey, directory of Afro-Ameriican Studies and a scholar of the black history in

"Black migration has been a central part of the black experience," sid Ferris, "and a continuing theme of writers, artists

Cornbread's down-home flavor can't be matched, so it's too bad it can't stand up to thin slicing and hands-on sandwich eating.

But cornbread may soon be liberated from its role as second fiddle to other breads when it's time for ham and cheese.

Kathleen A. Warner, a food technologist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has whipped up an experimental sandwich-style cornbread that could star at the deli counter and bake shop. Made with corn flour instead of cornmeal, the new bread stays together when cut, like regular white and wheat sandwich breads do.

Warner says the new bread has a delicate corn flavor and apart from conventional breads. Its texture resembles that of some popular coarsetextured breads, and it slices

"It really enhances the taste of a sandwich with turkey, swiss cheese and alfalfa sprouts. It also makes good toast," says Warner, from her laborat-ory 'kitchen' in the Northern Regional Research Center operated by USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Peoria, Ill.

'Corn-four bread is more likely to appear in specialty bake shops, delis and restaurants," says Warner. But if the new bread catches on there, a pre-mixed dough may some day be on supermarket shelves.

For taste, she rates corn-flour

Ask Ochsner

Q. If a minor child is brought to an emergency room because of an injury, can the child be treated without parental consent? Dr. Richard Y. McConnell, head of the department of emergency medicine at Ochsner Clinic, says that the severity of the injury is of major, impor-tance when determining the treatment of anyone who is brought to an emergency room. When a person present himself for treatment in an emergency situation, a certain amount of 'implied consent" is assumed.

In cases where a minor is injured, if the injury is not severe, the emergency first aid will be administered and the child will be made as comfortable as possible until the child's parents or legal guardian can be contacted. If the injury of illness needs urgent attention, evaluation and treatment of the condition will begin as soon as the patient arrives in the emergency room even in the cases of young children. During this time, attempts to contact parents or legal guar-dians will be made. In circumstances when life-threatening injuries are sustained, treatment would be administered immediately even if parents or legal guardians were unavail-

In cases where teenages enter the emergency room for treatment of venereal disease or other reportable infectious diseases or for treatment of pregnancies, parental consent is not required. Dr. McConnell says if parents know they are going to be separated from their children for an extended period of time due to vacations, family visits or summer camp, they may consider giving a power of attorney to the perons in charge of their child. Usually, a simply written statement signed by one of the parents and notarized will suffice, he concludes.

1988 pecan crop future hinges on pests, rain

By Linda S. Moore Mississippi Cooperative

Extension Service Mississippi's 1988 pecan crop's future is depending heavily on future rainfall and the extent of damage caused by a damaging insect.

Phyllcxera, an aphid-like insect which damages the young terminal, and an unusually dry spring could damage this year's otherwise healthy pecan crop.

"As a whole, the pecan crop looks good," said Dr. Freddie Rasberry, horticulturist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "The harvest should yield 8 to 10 million pounds compared to 6 million last year."

A late freeze during the early growing season severely damaged last year's crop causing many nuts to stick to the trees and not ripen.

Phylloxera began forming a gauze on the terminals in March, which is when farmers should have been taking preventative measures with insecticide. Failure to spray or spray adequately is resulting in this year's pest problem.

Rasberry said that at this point in the season there is nothing growers can do if they have a phylloxera problem.

The horticulturist said the early dry weather will cause some pecans to abort from the trees compared to late draughts that prevent the nuts from filling out. He said the good news about the drought is that the dryness is preventing most diseases in the pecan crop. Most diseases grow during wet weather and high humidity.

Rasberry said only about 10 to 15 percent of the groves in the state have some form of irrigation. About 20,000 acres of pecans are grown in the state.

Rainfall during the first part of the week was spotted in most Mississippi counties with more needed to substantially benefit most crops.

Lowndes County Agent Dexter S. Cochran said rains on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday left the fields too wet for work during the rest of the week. Estimating wheat harvest to begin in about 10 days, he said the prospects are good for the best wheat crop in several years in his country. Charles E. Waldrup, Smith

County agent, said, "Most of our crops are looking good despite the lack of moisture. Watermelons are not growing as expected due to the lack of moisture, and various other vegetables have been attacked by thrips and cucumber beetles."

In Tallahatchie County, weed and insect control are also main concerns, according to the county agent Doyle Varner, Jr.

not replace the conventional oven, the microwave is great for reheating and defrosting food. While not all products are best when cooked in a microwave oven, some foods have almost the same taste, texture and appearance as when cooked in a conventional oven.

The following are some tips to help you get the best results from microwave cooking: *Fill dishes or muffin cups only half full because microwaves expand batters more than conventional ovens.

*Line microwave muffin pan with 2 paper liners instead of one to absorb moisture. If no microwave muffin pan is available, custard cups may be used lined with paper liners for muffins.

Microwaves do not brown. Use darker batters and toppings to add texture and color to microwave-baked products.

*Microwave ovens tend to vary in cooking speeds. Start with the minimum cooking time called for in a recipe and cook to the desired level of doneness.

*For quicker baking without overcooking, place dishes on inverted saucer.

*In a microwave oven, the corners of a dish attract the most energy and tend to cook before the center. Shield or tent the corners of square dishes with small triangles of foil. The foil safely reflects microwaves and prevents corners from overcooking.

*Rotating dishes ¼ turn occasionally during baking also promotes even cooking.

Muffin mixes are quick and simple to use when baked in a microwave. Follow this recipe for delicious muffins in minutes.

Limiting irrigation benefits water level

By Linda S. Moore Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Current irrigation and aquaculture pumping practices could eventually deplete the Delta's water table and become uneconomical, unless excessive pumping and waste of water are eliminated.

"If we continue pumping at the present rate and not make efforts to reduce waste of water, we could deplete the water table," said Jim Thomas, an agricultural engineer with the Mississippi Cooperative Ex-

"Our water source is not something to be taken for granted. It must be managed," he said. "The water table appears to be a finite (limited) source."

Thomas made his comments following a recent Irrigation Workshop in Greenwood, sponsored by the Extension Service.

The irrigation specialist said the water table has been dropping an average of 11/2 feet each year for the last six years. He said serious maping of the water level has only been conducted since 1979.

"Projections are it could be seriously depleted early in the 21st Century if current rates of pumping continue," he said. Thomas said that since 1979, the Delta has experienced several dry years and a few years of above average rainfall. During years of above average rainfall, some replenishment or at least maintaining of the water level should occur.

Thomas said farmers have a tendency to overlook excessive water use because of the relatively low cost of water.

"In a way, it's a shame water is so cheap," he said. "When something is that cheap, it can create waste.' Of the four major methods of irrigation, Thomas said furrow and flood irrigation are the most wasteful. The state has about 767,500 irrigated acres. Flood irrigation acounts for 330,000, furrow accounts for 225,000 and center pivot irrigation is used on 200,000 acres. The travel gun method is used on 10,000 acres.

Reaching Your Retirement Goals

By Janet K. Lukens Area Consumer Management Specialist

Many Americans have come to believe that a lifetime of hard work will be rewarded by a comfortable retirement. Unfortunately, with increasing demands on the Social Security system and the rising cost of health care during retirement, this belief may be more of a

To make this dream a reality requires careful planning, and the earlier you begin planning for retirement, the better.

The following evaluation provided by Money magazine will give you an idea where you stand. Give yourself a point for each "yes" answer.

1. If you are under 40, are you saving 10% of your salary? If you are 40 or older, are you setting aside 10% of your salary specifically for retirement?

2. Is part of your savings in a tax-deferred account, such as an Individual Retirement Account or 401(k) plan?

3. Do you have three to six months worth living expenses in a cash account available for use in emergencies?

4. If you are under 35, do you own growth investments that you plan to leave untouched for at least a decade? If you are 35 or older, do you have a selldiversified portfolio that includes cash, bonds and real

7. If you are under 35, do you work for a company with a pension plan?

If you rate 1 point or less, you are in the pits when it comes to retirement planning. Start putting money away using techniques such as payroll deductions. If 2 to 4 points, you're off to a good start.

A rising demand for custommade clothing has led to an increase in the number of home-based sewing businesses in Mississippi.

These businesses provide one-of-a-kind, quality, customfit clothing often at a lower price than ready-to-wear, said Beth Duncan, clothing and textiles specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Duncan has been helping lead "Sewing as a Eusiness" workshops since February, and so far about 100 people have participated. However, that's not a real indication of the number of home-based sewing businesses in the state.

For the pilot project, which was designed from up to 80 workshop participants, there were more tan 500 applicants from throughout Mississippi and that's with minimal advertising, Duncan added.

Locating home-based sewing businesses is an uncertain science. Some can be found through fabric stores, others advertise in classified or display ads in newspapers, and others rely on word of mouth, Duncan

When selecting a home-based sewing professional, cus-tomers should verify the person's skill by talking with other customers and examining work the person has done.

"Expect to sign a work agreement, which is legally binding and contains a cost estimate," the specialist said. "The final cost should not exceed the estimate." She also said customers should be prepared to pay a deposit and to pay in full when the garment is completed. To insure proper fit, at least one fitting session is usually necessary. For more complex patterns, extra fitting sessios may be needed, Duncan said.

In many cases, contracting a home-based sewing professional can save money on clothes. However, consumers should be aware that with the expansion of the profession, prices are rising. "They've been underpriced for so long, and because demand has increased, they're realizing they must charge enough to cover their costs and salaries,"

Duncan said. "You should expect to pay for quality, skills and talent," she

Minacapelli mystery/comedy Cast selected

Minacapelli Dinner Theatre's next production, the mystery/comedy 'Catch Me If You Can' written by Jack Weinstock and Willie Gilbert, has been cast by Director Michael Madach.

Either deception or insanity creates the mystery in the comedy concerning the identity of a missing woman.

Daniel Corban, played by Les Simon of New York, N.Y. calls local police in the Catskill Mountains to report his wife of two weeks has disappeared from their honeymoon cabin.

A young woman (Vicki Darnell) arrives with a local priest (Gary Darnell) and claims to be the missing Mrs. Corban. The local detective (Dennis Hoffman) reveals the mystery, but not before a series of unexpected events leads to pistol shots, poison and murder.

Others in the cast include Joan Schmidt as Mrs. Parker and Michael Soehinlein plays her lover, Mr. Parker.

The delicatessen owner. Sidnay, is played by Madach in his premiere role at Minacapelli's. With the exception of Simon and Madach, the play will feature all Slidell residents in this Minacapelli's Dinner Theatre production.

The play opens on Friday, Aug. 19 and plays weekends through Sept. 18.

For Friday and Saturday evening performances doors open at 6:30 p.m. for buffet food service with the performance starting at 8:30 p.m.

On Sunday matinees doors open at 12:30 p.m. for the buffet with the performance starting at 2:30 p.m.

Madach suggests early reservations as some performances are sold out for this play.

Reflections

Come on Down!

By Fr. Jerome LeDoux, SVD

"And you have won $6,000.00!"

At these magic words, the game participant leaped in a frenzy of frenetic delight. screaming at the top of her lungs:

"Oh my God!"

Of course, all of us have seen this type of reaction on some TV game show. Even those of us who have almost zero interest in those shows, have seen enough to know that it is hard to find a more fevered pitch of enthusiasm anywhere else.

This certainly is not bad of itself, and, in some ways, can be construed as healthy recreation and excitement. Nevertheless, it does raise some interesting and at times puzzling reflections.

Most glaring of all is the raw enthusiasm displayed. Such a spontaneous outburst is the kind of expression which we would like to see more often, not at a ballgame, not on a gameshow, not at a music concert, but in the context of family and friends.

If only we could be made to feel that we, not just a tidy sum of money, are so worthwhile, so precious, so explosively interesting, that we provoke spontaneous outbursts of emotion in those whom we love and who in turn love us.

Unfortunately, and very oddly when you think it over, most of us seldom get to experience that raw exhiliration of being so prized and so stimulating that people go ape over us.

Why is it that so many of us are unashamed to flip out over a bundle of money, yet are so very reluctant to let our emotions hang out over a person or persons near and dear to us?

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Mt. 6:21). Apparently, we need to ask some hard questions about where our treasure really is, given the frequently indifferent reaction of our heart and our emotions toward our loved

Should we happen to be convinced that our loved ones are indeed our real treasures and that, therefore, our heart is in the right place, we must puzzle over other considerations. Is it, then, that main monster in the lives of most of us, insecurity, which shuts us off from displaying what should be for us a natural and joyous expression of our excitement, gratitude, tenderness and appreciation for those whom we love?

In the same vein, is it the fear of seeming light-headed and foolish to those for whom we show an outburst of emotions? Is it the fear of being chided or even ridiculed for doing so? Or, again, is it the fear of being rejected? Do we hesitate to make such a grand gesture for fear that it will not be merely ridiculed, but overtly repulsed as well?

Speaking of feeling foolish. that brings us to the second troubling reflection. The game participant, without any feeling of inhibition, shouted, "Oh my

By Darlene Underwood HOME ECONOMICS OPPORTUNITIES

Services available through extension home economics to residents of Hancock County range from group activities to one-on-one assistance or counseling for family and home management.

Early in 1988, the federal Cooperative Extension Service established a set of initiatives or priorities with a vision of improving services to families in the 21st Century. Those basic initiatives are being carried out in all areas of extension, including the division of home economics.

County home economists work at a grassroots level to facilitate the national initiatives which include building human capital, improving nutrition, diet and health, conserving and managing natural resources and revitalizing rural Mississippi.

Home ecomomists serve as the educational link between research-based information and the public.

They often assist in organizing or participate in programs for independent organizations. Some of those organizations in Hancock County have included AARP, North Bay PTO, Altrusa Club, Hancock Women's Club, Bay-Waveland Garden Club, Hancock County Senior Citizens and Hancock County Health Department. Home economists also conduct classes from time to time on various subject such as food preservation, cothing, family life and money management.

Another way information is circu ated to the public is through extension homemaker clubs. Hancock County has six clubs involving more than 90 women meeting at various time. each month.

Clubs usually have 10 to 20 members who participate in educational programs at each meeting. Topics may include food, nutrition and physical well-being, citizenship responsibilities, managing family income, home furnishings, clothing care and selection and several others.

Extension homemakers clubs are also instrumental in various volunteer activities on the countywide and statewide basis. Activities range from assisting with recreation activities at local nursing homes and raising money to help construct a Ronald McDonald House in Jackson. The house is a home away from home for the parents of critically ill children who are undergoing treatment at the University Children's Hospital. More than 14,000 women of all ages participate in Mississippi's homemaker clubs. Contact the Hancock County Extension Office at 467-5456 or 5457 for more information on how and why joining a club could be beneficial.

We sell potatoes that don't need buttering up.

You can't judge a potato by its jacket. Look inside the Golden Delite potato at Delchamps and you'll find a golden, creamy textured hybrid potato with a natural buttery flavor.

Prepare Golden Delites like other white potatoes. Bake them and there's no need to add butter or sour cream. Or mash them, serve them French fried or hash browned - any way you like.

And best of all, you can get the Golden Delite at Everyday Minimum Pricing. From Delchamps. The store that takes saving you money seriously.
